Welcome to the summer season and end of year productions at Central – including a newly commissioned work from our Honorary Fellow Tanika Gupta, to be presented in the new Courtyard Theatre – part of our recently completed North Block development.

This is always a period of mixed emotions; we celebrate the work of students completing their studies at Central, on the threshold of their professional careers, but sad it is to say farewell. We hope you will join us in wishing them well, and indeed follow their progress henceforth.

‘Careful the tale you tell
That is the spell
Children will listen.’

A baker and his wife are desperate for a child. But to get what they want they’re going to need to go on a perilous journey. Along the way they’ll meet Jack and his Beanstalk, Cinderella, Rapunzel, Little Red Riding Hood and a host of other characters, all wishing for something in their lives to change. But even after their wishes are granted, the consequences of their actions come back to haunt them and they are forced to ask if life was ever as simple as they once thought.

Distorting, combining and remixing a series of well-known fairy tales, Into The Woods is a dazzling, witty and thought-provoking musical from Stephen Sondheim and James Lapine that reminds us that the stories we tell are fallible and that we have to be careful how we tell them.

The planets are swinging around at all times, and their movements affect us all in different ways. All planets go retrograde, but Mercury’s journey seems to impact people much more than any other.

Romance tends to go haywire. Couples tend to create miscommunications that in turn can cause a domino effect of errors. This means holding off on signing contracts and forming partnerships and alliances, especially getting married!

Theseus disgruntledly agrees (mostly due to Hippolyta’s consternation and her astrologer’s panicked foreboding) to wait four days until these planetary effects have resolved, but unbeknownst to them, the spirit world is already going haywire.

We want to tell you a story
A story that isn't real
This is not real life
This is how real life
Feels for...
US
People in
Our twenties,
People on the verge of a future that feels like teetering on a cliff edge.
We'd love to take a bold brave leap forward but into what?
A PERMANENT STATE OF EMERGENCY is what we’re in
A STATE not of our making but one we have to endure or cure. Is running away the solution?
We can try.
Or, stay and fight, against ourselves?
Or YOU the ones that left us in this pile of ......?

A Permanent State Of Emergency is a new musical, specifically written for BA (Hons) Acting Musical Theatre 2019 students.

BONES
BY TANIKA GUPTA

Director Martin Wylde | Designer Sammy Dowson

Wednesday 24 - Saturday 27 July, 7.00pm
Friday 26 & Saturday 27 July, 2.00pm
The Courtyard Theatre, Central

Commissioned for and performed by MA Acting Contemporary

The idea behind this play comes from the recent exposure by local historian Catherine Cortess of the discovery of babies bones and skeletons found in the grounds of a mother and baby home in Tuam – County Galway – Ireland. The home was built on the terrain of an old workhouse and ran from 1921-1961.

My play is loosely based on these recent and historical events but is not a docu-drama of Tuam's buried babies, though it draws inspiration from the story. Told through the eyes of Grace and her grandchildren, Bones is a play about loss, the punishment of unmarried mothers and the legacy of demonisation of women by Church and State, where the human and reproductive rights of women are undermined.

Tanika Gupta, May 2019

There will be scenes of an upsetting nature.

PRESTO! is an ensemble show exploring queerness through music for young audiences. Then the orchestra came along and said there had to be just 12 notes and everyone had to play in tune or else! But where did the other notes go, the ones in between? PRESTO! is a show for young audiences who want to dance to their own rhythm, play out of tune and make some noise!

ANESTIS AZAS: THEATRE IN GREECE – THE REMAINS OF A CRISIS

Anestis Azas
Wednesday 24 April, 6.30pm

‘Working across Europe over the past couple of years, one of the first questions I am being asked, no matter where I go, concerns the influence of the financial crisis on Greek theatre. I will therefore depart in my lecture from this question, and from there depart on an introduction to my own work in the genre of documentary theatre, as well as our work at the Experimental Stage of the Greek National Theatre.’

The talk by Anestis Azas will be followed by a conversation with Dr Marissia Fragkou, Senior Lecturer in Performing Arts, Canterbury Christ Church University.

On Saturday 27 April, 1.00pm, there will also be a work-in-progress showing of a one-week student workshop lead by Anestis Azas, on the topic of multilingual theatre-making, as part of the AHRC-funded research project Performing Multilingualism for Monolingual Audiences: Creative Strategies and Practices in Contemporary European Theatre (Dr Margherita Laera, University of Kent and Professor Peter Boenisch, Central).

Anestis Azas is, together with Prodromos Tsinikoris, Artistic Director of the Experimental Stage 1 of the Greek National Theatre in Athens.

CENTRAL RESEARCH@WORK

Dr Naomi Paxton and Dr Tom Cornford
Wednesday 8 May, 6.30pm

In this series, Central researchers will talk about their latest explorations of theatre and performance, sharing their new material and/or writing, and discussing questions of research methods. These short ‘work in progress’ presentations will offer opportunities for response, discussion and a sharing of ideas about these ongoing research projects.

Dr Naomi Paxton: Reaching out in both directions – doing suffrage theatre in the 21st-century

This talk will explore the devising and development process, and how the use of contextual frameworks and inter-theatrical research methodologies can inform the restaging and reimagining of Edwardian suffragist plays for specialist and non-specialist audiences.

Dr Tom Cornford: Theatre Workshop: The Pre-History of Theatre-Making

This paper will explore Theatre Workshop as a precursor to the emergence, in the 1990s, of the category of ‘theatre-makers’.

THE ROLE OF THERAPEUTIC THEATRE IN RAISING AWARENESS ABOUT OPIOID ADDICTION

Dr Nisha Sajnani
Wednesday 15 May, 6.30pm

The focus of the Theatre & Health Lab at New York University (NYU) is to advance research on the psychological, physical and social benefits of theatre-making and performance. In this research presentation, Dr Sajnani will present an example of a recent collaborative study on the use of therapeutic theatre, an approach to drama therapy with a stated intent to promote the wellness of actors and/or audiences, in a state-wide effort to reduce opioid addiction.

Dr Nisha Sajnani is the Director of the Program in Drama Therapy and the Theatre & Health Lab at NYU. She is also a member of the Faculty in the NYU Educational Theatre and Rehabilitation Sciences PhD programmes.

CENTRAL RESEARCH@WORK

Dr Diana Damian Martin and Dr Gareth White
Wednesday 5 June, 6.30pm

Dr Diana Damian Martin: Balconies: Eastern Europe and the poetics of discontinuity

This presentation revolves around a series of images of balconies by artist Dan Perjovschi exploring how these images present the balcony as collapsing categories of movement and stillness, East and West, occupation and resistance, and asks: how does the balcony intervene into cultural narratives of Eastern Europe and its political discontinuities?

Dr Gareth White: In the midst of a re-staged revolution: compliance and contradiction in Counting Sheep

Mark and Marichka Marczyns’ Counting Sheep invites us to join the Maidan Square rebellion in Kiev, five years after the event, in a participatory performance of celebration and lament and a cry for recognition of an ongoing conflict.

All events take place at Central.

DECOLONISING HUMAN EXHIBITS: DANCE, RE-ENACTMENT AND HISTORICAL FICTION
Dr Prarthana Purkayastha
Wednesday 12 June, 6.30pm
This performance lecture focuses on decolonising exhibition practices and colonial archives. It offers a brief survey of literature on 19th-century colonial exhibitions and world’s fairs as a cultural practice and the complicity of academic disciplines, such as anthropology and ethnology, in promoting violent forms of pedagogy.
This talk delineates the structural limitations of re-enactments, a current trend in contemporary Euro-American dance, and argues that historical fiction as a corporeal methodology might be a viable decolonising strategy for dance studies.
Dr Prarthana Purkayastha is Senior Lecturer in Dance at Royal Holloway, University of London. Her dance research examines the intersections of race, gender and nationhood.

THE EDWARD GORDON CRAIG LECTURE 2019: JOHANNES SCHÜTZ
Johannes Schütz
Tuesday 2 July, 6.30pm
Central and the Society for Theatre Research are pleased to announce that the 2019 Edward Gordon Craig Lecture will be delivered by German stage and costume designer Johannes Schütz (b. 1950, Frankfurt).
The radical clarity of Schütz’s plain, non-illusionist stage cubes is unique. They engulf performers and spectators in situational, shared affective spaces that never disavow their theatricality. Having trained under Wilfried Minks at Hamburg, Schütz started his career in the 1970s at Schillertheater Berlin and Kammerspiele Munich.
He became a regular collaborator of German directors Frank-Patrick Steckel, Jürgen Gosch and Karin Beier, while throughout his career also regularly venturing into dance and opera. Working far beyond Germany (including English National Opera, Royal Court, and Young Vic London, Théâtre Royale La Monnaie Brussels, and the Sydney Theatre Company, Australia), Schütz has designed more than 250 productions to date.

TRAINING FOR THE FUTURE: NEW DIRECTIONS IN ACTOR TRAINING AND DIRECTOR PEDAGOGY FOR THE 21ST-CENTURY – AN INTERNATIONAL CONFERENCE
Professor Anne Bogart
Thursday 18 – Saturday 20 July
Training for the Future concludes Anne Bogart’s Leverhulme Visiting Professorship at Central and will consider contemporary actor training since Stanislavsky, and asks if the notion of a comprehensive methodological system still exists. Examining what it means to train or be trained, the conference will comprise lectures, workshops and discussions that consider the breadth and lineage of contemporary theatre training methodologies. We are delighted that Anne Bogart will give both a keynote address and practical training workshops.
The initial day of the conference (18 July) will be dedicated to sessions with, and for, postgraduate students, by Anne Bogart together with Central’s Professor David Harradine, Drs Diana Damian-Martin, Duška Radosavljević and Tom Cornford.
Each course has a maximum of 10 participants to ensure individual feedback and are led by a fully qualified trainer. It may not be possible to offer all courses publicised if numbers do not justify them. Please note that places are not confirmed until we are in receipt of an online application form and the full fee.

All courses take place at Central. The fee for each course is £450, except for the Free Taster Day.

HRH PRINCESS ALEXANDRA OPENS THE NEW NORTH BLOCK BUILDING

On 27 February 2019, Central was visited by its Royal Patron, HRH Princess Alexandra to mark the official opening of the new North Block building. This provided the Princess with an opportunity to meet staff and students and observe a variety of student work.

Princess Alexandra was greeted by Central’s President and alumnus Michael Grandage, together with the Chair of the Governing Body, John Willis, and Principal, Professor Gavin Henderson. She was escorted on a tour of the new facilities where she observed classes from the Drama, Applied Theatre and Education and Movement: Directing and Teaching courses.

The Princess and guests were entertained by performances from the Acting Musical Theatre course’s production of The Life, MA Music Theatre course’s production of The Tunnel and a short, critically-acclaimed film from the MA Acting for Stage and Screen course.

Following the tour, Princess Alexandra met with staff and student representatives, members of the design and project teams for the new building and friends and supporters of the School at a private reception held in the new Courtyard Theatre. She was presented with flowers by Student Union President, Holly Barraclough, on behalf of the student body before unveiling a brass plaque commemorating her visit and the building’s official opening.

Of the event, Central’s Principal, Professor Gavin Henderson, said:

“We are delighted that our Patron, HRH Princess Alexandra, was with us to formally open our new North Block development. She engaged with all sorts of student activity in the five new major studios and performance spaces. ‘I must come back for a show, and soon’ she said... and so she shall!”

Princess Alexandra previously visited Central in 2013 for a ceremony to bestow Honorary Fellowships on Julian Rudd and Claire Bloom and to celebrate the School’s receipt of Royal Title.

The North Block building, designed by an award-winning team at Tim Ronalds Architects, has provided Central with a major increase in rehearsal and performance space for its students. The new building houses five large, double-height studios including a movement studio with sprung floors, a sound studio with facilities to prepare students for work in broadcast, film and digital media, two fully equipped rehearsal studios, a new workshop space, a full range of ancillary spaces including new dressing and teaching rooms, and a new galleried Courtyard Theatre.

All production and performances spaces have been equipped with LED lighting systems and digital sound capabilities. These eagerly awaited new facilities give Central a great opportunity to ensure that students have the very best access to cutting-edge, modern amenities that will further enhance their training.

PROFESSOR CAROLYN COOPER AND NIKE JONAH LEAD AN EVENING OF EVENTS

On the evening of 12 March, Central welcomed academics, artists, industry friends and partners and members of its wider staff community for an evening of events focusing on fellowship and providing a space for a proper conversation and the recharging of energies and imaginations.

The evening, curated by Decolonising the Archive and Central Research, opened with Professor Carolyn Cooper, Visiting Fellow and Professor of Literary & Cultural Studies at the University of the West Indies, Mona, Jamaica with her lecture entitled Erotic Maroonage: Embodying Emancipation in Jamaican Dancehall Culture. The hyper-sexuality articulated in the lyrics of Jamaican dancehall DJs is conventionally dismissed as pure vulgarity, or ‘slackness’ in the Jamaican vernacular. In her talk, Professor Cooper argued that it ought to be re-theroised as a decidedly political discourse, a stage on which women and men act out rituals of release from historical roles of oppression.

Following this lecture, Central’s Visiting Research Fellow Nike Jonah hosted the second in her series of her salon style ‘family dinners’, part of three that are to be held at the School throughout this academic year. Bringing together staff from across all areas of Central’s community, the aim for each of Nike’s dinners is to gather together people with a willingness and enthusiasm to push diversity conversations into action. Joining staff at the dinners were other like-minded people from across the arts with their own great insights and stories to share.

Alongside Nike Jonah and Professor Carolyn Cooper, Central was delighted to welcome dancer and choreographer Gerrard Martin, and composer and playwright Michael Scott.

For her first dinner in November, Nike welcomed Dr Funmi Adewole, Vc2020 Lecturer/Associate professor of Dance at DeMontford University and former chair of Association of Dance of the African Diaspora, multidisciplinary artist Mohammed Ali (aka Aerosal Arabic), whose work regularly interrogates arts and Islam within contemporary Muslim society, Arts Council England Changemaker, producer and activist Kayza Rose, and Julie McNamara, a theatre maker and Artistic Director of Vital Xposure.

Nike Jonah said:

“The salon facilitated a beautiful exchange and engagement with various departments from across Central. This was inspiring, as many times these departments might not have cause to interact. I was impressed by the enthusiasm of the group to share their inputs and to contribute to the tapestry of what makes Central unique. The salon was a success in cementing the comradery of the staff and,
Despite a few challenges, I feel that the winning sentiment of solidarity and progress was achieved.” Jessica Bowles, Principal Lecturer and Central’s Course Leader for the MA/MFA Creative Producing course, worked together with Nike to organise and promote the salon, and said: “Academia is more than the cerebral, it is about creating beautiful moments in history.”

Connie Bell, from Decolonising The Archive, Curator, Heritage Arts Practitioner and Playwright said: “The entire fellowship/event was a complete success. The after party (Nike’s salon) gave testimony to how important it is to be a visionary, to act on interdependence via collaboration and to keep a unifying bond even in the midst of challenges.

This formulae can be noted as one for success, influence and true power, as it sends a message within and outside of the familiar circles that groups can work together and create bridges for exchange of culture, ideas and opportunities. This bridge is what eventually creates a passage for peace, promotes wellbeing in communities and saves our world from destruction.”

OUTBOX THEATRE’S AND THE REST OF ME FLOATS

And The Rest Of Me Floats is a performance all about the messy business of gender, made by Outbox Theatre and conceived and directed by Central’s Ben Burratta, a Lecturer in Applied Theatre Practices.

Devised by performers from across the trans, non-binary, and queer communities, the show weaves together autobiographical performance, movement, pop songs, stand-up, and dress-up in an anarchic celebration of gender expression and identity. This show was performed at The Rose Lipman Building in London in September 2017 and Birmingham Repertory Theatre in November 2017. It was then programmed by Bush Theatre as part of their 2019 season. The text is published by Oberon Books.

To date, over 3,500 people have seen the show and 91,000 people have viewed the trailer online. The performance was filmed by the V&A Museum and will form part of their National Video Archive of Performance. Alongside the performances, Outbox partnered with Gendered Intelligence (UK’s largest arts organisation working with trans youth) to deliver nine workshops for trans and non-binary actors aged 16 - 25. These workshops were based around the themes of the show and were delivered in conjunction with leading theatres The Royal Court, Birmingham Rep, Leeds Playhouse, Bush Theatre and Bristol Old Vic in order to introduce more trans people into actor training and the theatre industry.

And The Rest Of Me Floats was supported through funding from the National Lottery Community Fund, Arts Council England, Prime Theatre and The Royal Central School of Speech and Drama's Special Research Fund.

HALPIN PARTNERSHIP RACE EQUALITY REVIEW OF CENTRAL

In 2018, Central’s Board of Governors commissioned Halpin Partnership to conduct an external and independent review of the School’s principles, practices and processes in relation to race equality and inclusion. There was a high level of participation from staff, students and alumni who variously took part in interviews, focus groups and responded to surveys. The Board of Governors and Central’s senior management team are grateful to all those who contributed to this important review.

Central has set a clear ambition for to obtain a gold standard for race equality in performance arts training. The implementation of the recommendations of the report will give an opportunity to achieve transformational, lasting change to develop the School into a beacon of excellence in race equality.

A series of initiatives has been announced, including an additional investment of £100,000 to drive progress, further embedding race equality into all of Central’s activities. This new investment programme includes funding for a new full-time Equality and Diversity Advisor position. The funding will also support additional diversity training across the School, projects to support a more inclusive curriculum, the implementation of agreed actions and further diversity recruitment plans.

Central’s Board of Governors has established a new sub-committee, including staff and student governors, which reports to the full Board on matters of diversity and inclusion. This is chaired by an Independent Governor, Anne Mensah, and is monitoring the implementation of the Halpin Partnership recommendations and institutional diversity and inclusion goals with the aim of achieving cultural change. Ideas, suggestions and feedback from staff and students are also being sought on a new equality, diversity and inclusion statement that will be displayed in all teaching and rehearsal spaces.

A number of Faculty staff have been engaging proactively with the equality, diversity and inclusion agenda, and the School is delighted to have been able to make funds available for a number of course and student related initiatives. These include projects focussing on hidden histories of Central and the Embassy Theatre, support for staff to develop and disseminate scholarship around the decolonisation of the curriculum and a PhD project with the Black Theatre Archive in association with the National Theatre. Central continues to work with Open Door in relation to its acting audition processes and has signed up to Stage Sight, an industry-led diversity and inclusion initiative within technical, management, design and other off-stage areas of theatre practice.

Diversity brings richness, knowledge and innovation. Central is committed to proactively embracing diversity in all its work and believes that understanding and valuing differences will help to find more ways to be excellent in everything it does.

DR ELLA PARRY-DAVIES IS NAMED A 2019 ‘NEW GENERATION THINKER’

Congratulations to Central’s British Academy Postdoctoral Fellow, Dr Ella Parry-Davies, who has been named a 2019 New Generation Thinker. Dr Parry-Davies is one of ten New Generation Thinkers to be selected by BBC Radio 3, BBC Arts and the Arts and Humanities Research Council (AHRC).

The New Generation Thinkers were chosen after a national call for the best research ideas with the potential to be shared through the media. They will now have the opportunity to make programmes for Radio 3 and other outlets, as well as contributing to wider media through the AHRC and taking part in the 2019 Being Human Festival. In addition, the scheme partners with BBC Four, where some of the selected academics will be given the space to challenge our thinking.

Dr Ella Parry-Davies, British Academy Postdoctoral Fellow at Central, said:

“This is a remarkable achievement for Ella and for Central. It will ensure her research reaches new audiences and offer her a new platform for the exchange of ideas. We are delighted to be supporting her on this important project.”

Professor Andrew Thompson, Executive Chair of the AHRC, said:

“The New Generation Thinkers scheme is all about helping the next generation of researchers to find new and wider audiences for their research by giving them a platform to share their ideas and allowing them to have the space to challenge our thinking.

“The New Generation Thinkers scheme is also one of the major ways the AHRC engages the public with the inspiring research taking place across the UK. More than ever we need the new insights and knowledge that come from arts and humanities researchers to help us navigate through the complexities of our globalised world and address the moral and ethical challenges of today and tomorrow.”

Central’s Director of Research, Professor Maria Delgado, said:

“Diversity brings richness, knowledge and innovation. Central is committed to proactively embracing diversity in all its work and believes that understanding and valuing differences will help to find more ways to be excellent in everything it does.”

“I’m delighted to join this fantastic cohort of New Generation Thinkers. My research is all about exploring self-representation with migrant domestic and care workers, who are often undervalued and whose battles against exploitation can go unheard. I am collaborating with this community on a series of soundwalks, and experimenting with sound is key to the project. So it’s brilliant to work with BBC Radio, an exciting platform for new kinds of listening that will help to share migrant workers’ perspectives with a wider audience.”

The New Generation Thinkers were selected from hundreds of applications from researchers at the start of their careers. They have all demonstrated a passion for communicating their work and a skill for making complex areas of study engaging, accessible, and enlightening.

The final ten were chosen after a four-month selection process, including a series of one-day workshops at the BBC in Salford and London. They have undergone training and development with the AHRC and will spend a year being mentored by producers from Radio 3’s Free Thinking programme. Throughout this programme they will take part in Free Thinking discussions and go on to write episodes of BBC Radio 3’s The Essay.

The selected academics were publicly unveiled at a free event recorded as part of BBC Radio 3’s Free Thinking Festival at Sage Gateshead on 30 March and the event was broadcast on BBC Radio 3 on 25 April. As with all Free Thinking programmes, the broadcast will also be on the BBC Radio 3 website, BBC Sounds and as a BBC Arts & Ideas podcast. Further programmes focused on the NGT’s research will be aired throughout 2019.

At the Free Thinking Festival, the 2019 New Generation Thinkers were joined by the 2018 Thinkers, who recorded episodes of BBC Radio 3’s The Essay before live audiences at Sage Gateshead.

CENTRAL JOINS KNOWLEDGE EXCHANGE FRAMEWORK PILOT GROUP

Central is pleased to announce that it has been selected by Research England as one of 21 Higher Education Institutions in England to take part in the new Knowledge Exchange Framework (KEF) pilot group.

Central is the smallest specialist arts institution involved in the pilot group which also includes the University of Oxford, London School of Economics and Political Science and Imperial College London, as well as fellow arts institutions University of the Arts London and Arts University Bournemouth.

The pilot exercise will feed into a raft of evidence, including from a sector-wide written consultation, on how the KEF will operate in England. Representatives from the devolved funding bodies in Scotland and Wales are also attending.

The 21 universities selected are drawn from all of the proposed KEF clusters, and represent a diverse range of English Higher Education Institutions, with a good geographical cross-section of institutions from across the country.

The KEF aims to provide institutions with new ways to understand, benchmark and improve their performance, and to provide business and other users of HEI knowledge with another source of potentially useful information. Research England will work with the pilot group to test the specific metrics and proposed narrative statements, as well as the cluster membership, and how results should be presented, during a series of workshops between February and May 2019.

The outcomes of these workshops will be published in a report evaluating the pilot, alongside an analysis of consultation responses. Research England anticipates publishing these documents in early summer 2019, with final decisions on how the KEF should progress in late summer 2019.

More information about the KEF pilot programme can be found on Research England’s website https://re.ukri.org.

INTRODUCTION

Central is a charitable institution. We receive funding from the Higher Education Funding Council for England, as well as private donations from individuals, corporations, and trusts and foundations. These different forms of support enable the School to build and grow in line with the needs of our students, the industry, and academic research.

Significantly, Central is open to all potential students regardless of their background and is committed to providing access to over £400,000 of scholarships and bursaries per year. We seek to retain those who struggle financially and to enable all students to reach their full potential, making financial aid a key area of development.

We are grateful to all our donors and welcome new supporters who help Central achieve its mission to develop practitioners and researchers who shape the future of theatre and performance across the UK and beyond.

BUILDING THE FUTURE: CENTRAL’S NEW NORTH BLOCK DEVELOPMENT

In January 2019, Central was delighted to open its new North Block Building, providing a major increase in rehearsal and performance space for students, as well as creating a new asset for the local community. We are currently in the process or raising the final £40,000 of this £16.7m project, with several opportunities available for potential supporters.

To find out more about the new North Block building and learn how you can help build Central’s future, please contact Sophie Hussey on +44 (0)20 7559 3975 / email sophie.hussey@cssd.ac.uk / www.cssd.ac.uk/content/centrals-new-north-block-development.

LEGACY AND IN MEMORY GIVING

Central is overwhelmed by the number of individuals who have either chosen to leave a gift in their Will, or who have made a gift in memory of a loved one.

Leaving a gift in your Will may help fund scholarships, act as investment in long-term capital projects, or simply provide much-needed funds to enhance the School’s charitable objectives. Legacies and bequests are exempt from inheritance tax, meaning that as a registered charity any gift bequeathed to Central will be tax deductible. In Memory gifts can be used to support Central more generally, or can be specifically directed towards a cause in tribute to the particular interests of the deceased.

For further information about Legacy and In Memory Giving, please contact Meg Ryan on +44 (0)207 449 1636 / meg.ryan@cssd.ac.uk.
